Investors should carefully consider investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses. This and other important information is contained in the fund prospectuses and summary prospectuses, which can be obtained from a financial professional and should be read carefully before investing.

These portfolios consist of an allocation of funds for investors to consider and are not intended to be investment recommendations. Financial intermediaries may or may not recommend them to clients. The portfolios are hypothetical asset allocations designed for individuals with different time horizons and risk profiles. Allocations may not achieve investment objectives. Please talk to your financial professional for information on other investment alternatives that may be available to you. In making investment decisions, investors should consider their other assets, income, and investments.

The portfolios' risks are directly related to the risks of the individual funds in proportion to their allocations, as described below.

Investing outside the United States involves risks such as currency fluctuations, periods of illiquidity and price volatility, as more fully described in the prospectus. These risks may be heightened in connection with investments in developing countries.

The return of principle for bond funds and for funds with significant underlying bond holdings is not guaranteed. Fund shares are subject to the same interest rate, inflation and credit risks associated with the underlying bond holdings. Lower rated bonds are subject to greater fluctuations in value and risk of loss of income and principal than higher rated bonds.

The use of derivatives involves a variety of risks, which may be different from, or greater than, the risks associated with investing in traditional cash securities, such as stocks and bonds.
