What factors influenced results

During the fund's fiscal year, the global economy displayed signs of strengthening. After a brief recession in the second half of 2023, Europe experienced growth, supported by improvements in business and consumer confidence. Among Asia-Pacific countries, China's economic activity was mixed, with stronger exports, but ongoing issues in the property market persisted. In Japan, after the central bank raised interest rates for the first time since 2007, the yen weakened, providing support for exports.

The fund's holdings in information technology were the largest contributor to the portfolio, and together with investments in energy and health care generated the strongest returns in absolute terms. Investments in materials and communication services also supported the fund's return. A diverse selection of individual companies contributed positively to results.

Conversely, investments in utilities and consumer staples detracted from overall results. Investments in the real estate sector posted some of the worst declines in absolute terms, due largely to the property sector downturn in China. Likewise, the fund's holdings in the Asia-Pacific region (ex-Japan) posted negative overall returns.

How a hypothetical $10,000 investment has grown
