What factors influenced results

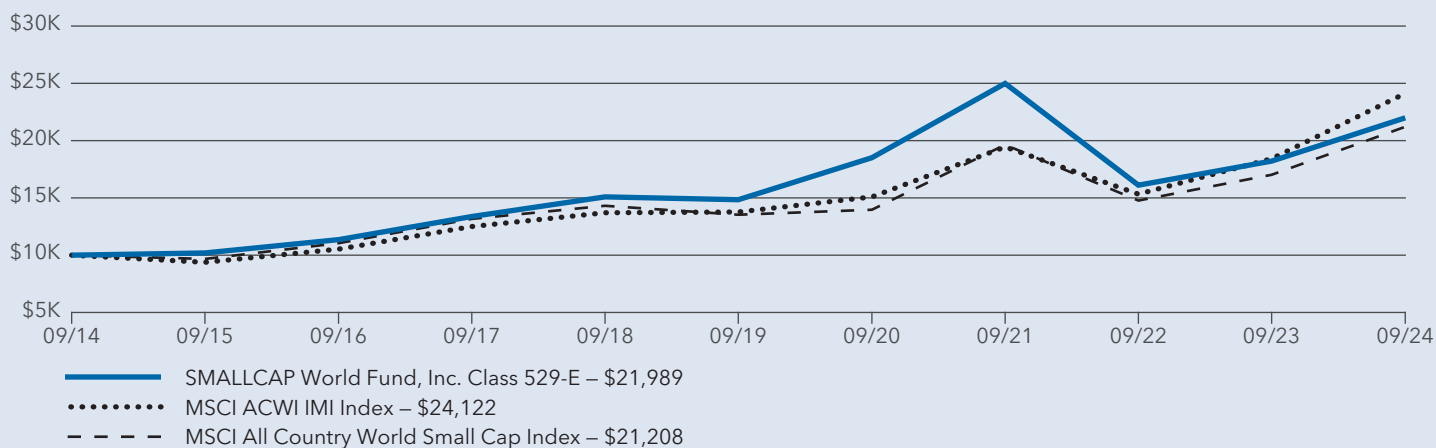

Global equity markets saw a strong rally over the course of the fund's fiscal year, with easing inflation and rate cuts by the Federal Reserve restoring confidence in stocks, particularly in the United States. The market strength was particularly concentrated in mega-cap US stocks, with small-cap stocks lagging the overall market.

Portfolio holdings in industrials, financials, and consumer discretionary had better returns relative to the overall portfolio. In industrials, companies that indirectly benefit from the build out in AI data centers such as Comfort Systems, as well as the reshoring trend in the US, positively contributed to results. Companies in consumer discretionary, such as Cava, TopBuild and MakeMyTrip, were additive to results as well. On the other hand, Staples and Energy shares lagged the overall portfolio.

Geographically – US companies, where the fund had the largest exposure, saw returns above those of the overall portfolio. Some select emerging markets were also additive, such as India, Philippines and Turkey, while China lagged the fund. Shares domiciled in the Eurozone, the UK and Japan saw returns below that of the overall portfolio.
